EXCELLENT FREE POSTER + VOUCHERS FOR MORE FUN DAYS OUT!!!

Hi Action Savers!

It's all very exciting at the moment because we've got lots of brand new members, so we'd like to say an extra big HELLO and welcome you to the Action Savers Club. This issue is packed with pages of fun – from making a Seedhead (turn to page 13 if you don't know what that is!), to reading about our ice sport action heroes on page 5. Plus all our regulars – the hilarious cartoon antics of the Gang, quizzes and puzzles, and of course lots of brilliant prizes and giveaways. Many of you already know the Gang, but if you don't, let me introduce you:

The leader of the Gang is Tom. He's the oldest and he loves all kinds of sport.

This is trendy Nikki. She has lots of hobbies and loves the environment.

Jo is the brains of the Gang. He's computer-crazy and is always reading.

Anna is the youngest member (Tom's little sister) but she doesn't let herself be pushed around by anyone!

Here's Dudley – Tom and Anna's dog. He's just mad through and through!

Read on to see more of the Gang! Please, please, please keep on writing to us – we love to know what you're up to. Write about anything – what else would you like to see in the magazine? What are you saving up for? What are your hobbies? Who's your favourite celebrity? Do you put your left sock on first or your right one?! You get the idea... If your letter, photo, drawing or joke is printed, you'll get an Action Savers Club T-shirt – so get scribbling!

I missed my sweets but I like helping poor people.
Courtney Linton, age 7.

STAR LETTER

Our star letter writer is...

Fionnuala Somerville!
Well done! She has won three brilliant games: Operation, Fraidy Cats and Flix. Congratulations!

Ways To Save

Every coin you get, do a coin rubbing of it and then when you come to count your money, count the coin rubbings instead.
Nadia Tarbiat, age 11.

My hobbies are playing piano, cooking and bike riding. My best friends are Rosanne, Tessie and Paula.
Samantha McGregor, age 9.

Mag

Here is a snap of me and India. He's called India because on his back it looks like a map of India.
Rebecca Redman, age 8.

I am saving my money up for a holiday in Italy. I want to go there because I want to learn Italian and see how Italians pronounce their words because I'm half Italian. Stacey Knight, age 9½.

My sister and I perform small concerts every Christmas and Easter for family and friends. We raise money for the RSPCA each time. Without animals and plants we would never survive. We owe them our respect. In our concerts we sing, play the clarinet, harp, piano and guitar. Fionnuala Somerville, age 9.

Dudley is performing my favourite type of singing – rap. I am in the school choir and we have recently been practising three songs from Jungle Book. We performed them at our school on our exhibition evening. I hope to be a very famous singer when I am older.
Christopher Weighill, age 11.

JUST A JOKE!
Where do fish put their money?
In the river bank!
Brian Moore, age 11.

Special thanks to Edward Norton, age 9, for his great portfolio of the Gang!

Next Issue's Star Letter Prize

If your letter is chosen as our STAR LETTER, you'll win a fantastic bike from Muddy Fox. We've got a Silver Fox Delta (shown here) if you're 7 to 9 years old or a Panther if you're 10 to 12 years old – both with trendy jumbo forks and Shimano gears. (Frame and colour may vary from picture.) The prize also includes a helmet and knee pads for protection.

Last issue's

Loggerheads

The sports debate

In the last issue, Loggerheads asked you whether or not boys and girls should play the same sports at school. Here are some of your points of view.

What you said...

I think that boys and girls should be able to play together in every sport, but if some girls think they're a bit too weak to play against rough boys, they should be able to have an all-girls team and vice versa.
Anenta Ratneswaren, age 10.

I think girls should play the girly games and boys play their games because football and rugby are rough games and boys are rough. Hockey and netball are soft games and girls are soft, so these games should stick as girly games.
Bhavna Bhooobun, age 11.

At my school the girls play football and like it. The girls support football teams and take just as much interest as boys do. Boys should also be allowed the chance to play netball and hockey. If we don't play these games, we'll never know if we like them or not! Rules may be slightly different in an opposite gender game because of the difference in physical ability – but the game would still stay virtually the same!
Roddy Peters, age 11.

Some boys, like me, would rather play netball or hockey than football and rugby so I would say that you should get to play what you want.
Nicholas Jones, age 8.

WHOOOPS!

So who spotted the mistake in the last issue on page 3? It should be a one penny coin, not a one pence coin. Singular is penny (so one penny), plural is pence (so two pence). Sorry about that! And well done if you spotted it!

HOW THEY DID IT:
 Money the girls earned by helping Nikki's mum carry old clothes to the charity shop = £2
 Money the boys earned cleaning the shoes of four relatives (at 25 pence a shoe) = £2 (8x25p)
Total = £4 (£3.20 on ingredients and 80p on cake decorations).

Tom was down in the dumps. The next day was his birthday but the Gang seemed to have forgotten. "Some friends they are," he grumbled to himself. Little did he know that they had remembered his birthday and were planning a surprise party for him! Everyone was helping and, as it was a special occasion, they did chores to earn the money to buy ingredients for a cake. "It's cheaper and more environmentally friendly to have homemade decorations!" said Nikki. So Anna and Dudley dug out some old Christmas tinsel and baubles in the colours of Tom's favourite football team. With the help of Anna's mum, they made a 'Happy Birthday' banner from the letters in old newspapers. Meanwhile Jo and Nikki bought the ingredients and with Jo's dad they made a huge, gooey chocolate cake.

The next day Tom couldn't find the Gang anywhere. He was feeling really sorry for himself when suddenly he heard Anna calling him from the kitchen. When he got there it was very dark and quiet. "How strange," he thought, turning on the light. "Surprise!" they all yelled. "Wow! What a birthday!" said Tom beaming.

WASTE NOT, WANT NOT!

As we all know, the Earth's resources won't last forever so it's crucial that we stop using them up. Don't just throw things away – recycle old newspapers, bottles and cans. Most towns have recycling banks (big metal containers) where you can take your old items to be made into new products. Your local council can tell you where your nearest recycling centre is.

GAME ON!

Sometimes you find yourself in need of a good game – all you need is a few friends and...

1. A sheet! The Sheet Game: one person leaves the room. While he or she is gone, some of the others hide under the sheet, making weird shapes with their bodies. Not everyone has to get under the sheet; some can hide elsewhere in the room. When the person outside returns, he or she has to guess exactly who is under the sheet. The point is to make it as difficult to guess as possible. Trickery is the name of the game! Minimum number of players – five.

2. Doughnuts! The Doughnut Game: tie doughnuts to a washing line with pieces of string (don't forget to ask an adult to help you with the scissors) and then try to eat them without using your hands and without licking your lips! It's a sticky business! Number of players – as many as you like!

3. Two Spoons! The Spoon Game: tie a teaspoon to the end of a long (3 metre) piece of string. Then tie a second teaspoon to a second piece of string. Divide players into two lines. The first person in each line threads a spoon DOWN the neck of their clothing and down until it comes out of their trouser leg or skirt. The next person threads the spoon UP their clothes until it comes out of the neck. Carry on along the line. The first line to finish wins. Minimum number of players – three in each team.

ALEXANDRA

Action HEROES on Ice

Alexandra White, 11, and Stuart Madden, 12, have both been skating since they were five or six. Now they skate as a pair for Chelmsford and since 1995 they have won two British titles. Their skating routine is quite acrobatic, "The boy should really be a bit bigger so he can do the lifts," says Alexandra. Stuart doesn't worry about dropping his partner: "In the lifts it depends on me, but it's teamwork mainly." Alexandra isn't so sure: "It is scary... but usually I don't fall." They have both had minor injuries but, considering how often they skate, it's surprisingly few. "We practise five times a week up to three hours a time," says Alexandra. Despite this they find time for other things: "I try to spend as much time as possible on my homework," says Stuart. "I made an agreement with my mum and dad: if my grades dropped, I'd give up skating." He also does athletics at school and collects rare American comics, while Alexandra enjoys jazz dancing. Both of them are ambitious and would like to get to the Olympics but Stuart adds: "I want to do the best I can, but I just love skating and I don't mind if I don't win."

To find out more about ice skating, call the National Ice Skating Association on 0171 253 3824. Always remember to ask an adult before using the phone.

Yassin Ahrazem, 11, plays ice hockey for the Haringey Junior Ice Hockey Club in north London and, with the team, he won the South East Champions '94/'95. Yassin began playing ice hockey when he was just six! "You do have to be a good skater," he says. "It doesn't matter if you're short though - it's how you play. And I've always really liked team games."

It looks like a dangerous sport, but he says: "It's a fast game but for under 12s it's a non-contact sport. You can touch but not roughly." He practises at the club twice a week for an hour and a half and, in his spare time, he likes to rollerblade, play street hockey and play the piano.

So what's his tip for others wanting to get into ice hockey? "Practise, listen to your coach and try your hardest at all times."

To find out more about ice hockey, call the British Ice Hockey Association on 0115 982 1515. Always remember to ask an adult before using the phone.

If you've got an interesting hobby, write and tell us about it!

ICE

Ice is water in a frozen, solid state. If the water is pure, it will freeze at a temperature of 0°C (32°F). Water that contains salt freezes at a lower temperature, which is why salt is sometimes put on the roads in winter to prevent ice forming. When water freezes, it expands, becoming less dense. This is why icebergs float - they are lighter than the surrounding water.

Ways To Save

Put your penny coins into stacks of ten. When you have ten stacks, exchange the coins with an adult for a pound coin.

the STORY

Today, 'R&B' (Rhythm and Blues) is a specific type of pop music played by bands such as MN8. But it was MN8's R&B ancestors who really invented pop! Rhythm and Blues started in the 1950s when singers like Elvis Presley created their own version of blues music, which had been sung by black stars from around the Mississippi river in the USA. This new music was called Rock and

The Beatles

Roll and soon became popular in Britain. In the 1960s two British bands, The Beatles and The Rolling Stones, became so successful in America that people called it a 'British invasion'. So Britpop was actually born 30 years before Oasis and Blur ever existed!

The Beatles were the Take That of their day, followed by screaming girls wherever they went. Like Take That, they found touring too stressful; but instead of splitting up they stopped doing concerts and just made albums.

In the 1970s, pop bands developed all sorts of different styles – like Glam Rock, Heavy Metal and Punk.

By the 1980s, guitars were no longer the most important instruments in pop; electronic keyboards had taken over with bands like the Pet Shop Boys. Then dance music became popular with songs that didn't even have singers!

So the constant change goes on in the 1990s; if you are still getting over the end of Take That, just remember there's a lot more to come yet. And don't believe anyone who says Gary Barlow won't still be around in the future – they said the same thing about Beatles star Paul McCartney in 1969!

Fact Flash

The biggest-selling single of all time in the UK is 'Do They Know It's Christmas?' recorded in 1984 by Band Aid, a 'super-group' including George Michael and Bob Geldof. The record sold over 8 million copies worldwide and raised money for the starving children in Ethiopia.

The Gramophone

The gramophone, or record player, was invented in 1877 by Thomas Edison. Before then, there was no way of recording. If you wanted to hear the latest Mozart hit, you had to go and see an orchestra playing it!

Fact Flash

The classical composer Beethoven and Brian Wilson of the 1960s pop band The Beach Boys are both considered to be musical geniuses – even though both of them were deaf!

The first gramophones didn't look at all like today's hi-fis; you had to wind them up and there was only one speaker which looked like a big horn. But they soon became outdated because the records they played were so fragile and got scratched and broken easily. The first solution was tape cassettes; and now we have CDs, which are more expensive than records but still a lot cheaper than getting Oasis to perform in your bedroom!

Test your musical knowledge in our quiz on page 12

MN8

POP

IT'S A CLASSIC!

Before the pop charts existed, the world's most popular musicians were classical composers such as Beethoven, Bach and Mozart. The first performance of a new symphony was as exciting as the release of a new album. They still top the classical album charts today, over 100 years after they died!

Win

Don't know much about classical music? Here's your chance to learn! We've got five boxed CD sets of 'The Classic Experience' each with four compilation CDs of some of the most well-known classical pieces ever written. You'll be surprised at how many you recognise!

New Year Across

When we celebrate New Year in Britain, singing and making merry with family and friends on 31 December, we may not realise that other countries and religions celebrate the occasion in different ways and at different times...

Chinese New Year

The next Chinese New Year will fall on 7 February instead of 1 January. This is because China, like some other countries and religions, has a different calendar to ours in Britain.

It is the custom for Chinese people to wear new clothes at New Year and to pay their respects to the Kitchen God by cleaning the house, ensuring all bills are paid and decorating the walls with flowers. Food gifts are given such as little orange fruits called kumquats, symbolising good fortune ahead.

When the moon is full, the New Year festivities are brought to a close with the Lantern Festival. The streets are filled with lanterns signifying the coming of spring and new life. Dancers jig beneath the long, snaking skirts of lion and dragon costumes to ward off evil spirits.

The Animal Years

Each new Chinese year is called after an animal – 1997 is the 'Year of the Ox (or Cow)'. The animals are taken from a legend dating back over five centuries before Jesus Christ was born. The God Buddha commanded that every animal should visit him and pay their last respects before he died. However, many of the animals were afraid, having been punished for bad deeds in the past, and did not show up – with 12 brave exceptions: a rat, ox, tiger, rabbit, snake, horse, goat, monkey, rooster, dog, pig and dragon.

Each year is dedicated to one of these creatures and given its characteristics, as are the people born in that year. To find out which animal sign you are, assuming you were born between 1984-1990, check out the chart, right:

If you were born in 1985, you will have the characteristics of a cow!

YEAR	ANIMAL
1984	Rat
1985	Ox/Cow
1986	Tiger
1987	Rabbit
1988	Dragon
1989	Snake
1990	Horse

Cross The Globe

Hogmanay

– Scottish New Year

The Scots certainly know how to celebrate this event with the lighting of hilltop beacons (fires) and plenty of merriment and singing. You may have heard people sing the traditional Scottish song 'Auld Lang Syne' in which they link arms and celebrate friendship past and present. In Edinburgh, come midnight, everyone converges on the Royal Mile, the main street of the city, where there is dancing, music and fireworks.

RESOLUTIONS

If you've ever made a resolution or a promise at any time of year, and have stuck to it, write and tell us about it!

Vishu

– The Malayalam New Year

This is celebrated every year on 14 April by followers of the Hindu religion from a south-west region of India called Kerala. Parents create a special display in their homes with flowers, fruit, vegetables, mirrors and brass lamps, but their children aren't allowed to see it until New Year's Day. Then presents and money are exchanged and family and friends get together for a lively feast.

Above: Young boy blows a 'shofar' to herald the Jewish new year.

Rosh Hashanah

– Jewish New Year

Jewish people celebrate New Year in September and October on the first and second days of Tishri (the Jewish calendar). At this time they seek forgiveness from God for any wrongs they may have done. There are 10 days of prayer and then the Day of Atonement when many Jews will fast (go without food) for a day as a sign of their dedication to God.

British New Year

On December 31 in Britain the seasonal celebrations involve making merry with friends and family. Hundreds of people converge on Trafalgar Square in London for a big open party with singing and dancing. Others in London go along to Westminster Bridge to hear Big Ben strike midnight. Throughout Britain 'Auld Lang Syne' has been adopted from the Scots as the traditional song.

Winter Stars

If I were an animal I would be...

Mark Speight from Scratchy & Co: "I'd be Wacko from The Animaniacs. I've got no idea what kind of animal he is - he's a kind of a cat crossed with a monkey I think - but he's completely and totally insane and is always playing pranks on people."

Paul Hendy, Mr Barker from Dear Mr Barker: "I would be a chicken - then I would finally be able to understand what it is exactly that Miss Chicken is saying!"

Jodie Baldwin, 'Cher' in Byker Grove: "If I were an animal I can guarantee I would be a monkey because they chatter a lot and I've been told that I do too! What about a parrot, that would be good. They're colourful and beautiful as well as chatty!"

Neil Buchanan from Art Attack: "A bird - I love flying! In fact I'm learning to fly at the moment and if I were a bird I wouldn't have to take the exams and read lots of boring books about aeroplane engines!"

CHARACTERISTICS

- Friendly, caring, clever and funny. Rats love people. Sometimes secretive, they like taking risks and are always on the move.
- Calm, sensible and reliable, Oxen/Cows are good listeners and excellent in a crisis. They can be grumpy sometimes!
- Brave, passionate, aggressive and outspoken. Tigers are also warm and generous but don't like being taken for granted.
- Sociable, kind, artistic but not show-offs. Sensitive souls, Rabbits often imagine they are ill, but are generally lucky in life.
- Dragons are independent, intelligent, determined, sometimes impatient and quick to anger, but also quick to apologise.
- Knowledgeable and careful but easily shocked. Snakes demand loyalty from their friends and are selfish and lazy at times.
- Energetic, sporty, well-dressed and great in conversation. Horses enjoy gossip, arguments and often believe they know best.

FAB LAB CORNER

MAKE A SEEDHEAD

EQUIPMENT: A pair of old tights; a large plastic lemonade or cola bottle; scissors; grass or cress seeds; sawdust; felt; and glue.

Remember to ask an adult to help you when you use scissors or glue!

METHOD:

1. Cut the top and bottom off the plastic bottle with a pair of scissors so that you have a plastic tube. Top tip: put sticky tape around the cut edges of the bottle so that they are not rough or sharp.

2. Cut one leg off the tights at knee level so that it is like a pop sock. Pull the tight over the tube so that the foot is stretched over the base.

3. Pour the seeds into the tube so that they are lying in an even layer on the foot of the tight.

4. Pour sawdust on top of the seeds so that it fills 10-15cm of the tube. Push it down with your fist to pack it in tightly.

5. Keep pushing down so that the tube slips out of the top of the tight. Then tie the top in a knot so that the seeds and sawdust are contained inside. The knotted end is the base of your Seedhead. You can balance him or her on a mug or small flower pot.

6. Now give your Seedhead a face using felt or buttons for features - you could even buy sticky wobbly eyes. Simply glue them on. To make a nose, grab a bit of the face in the middle and twist it around tying it with thread or a small elastic band.

7. All that is missing now is hair. Water the top of the head with half a glass of water every day and within five days your Seedhead should begin sprouting a fantastic mane of green hair! You may find the hair grows through more easily if you cut through the tight at the top of the head. Why not play hairdresser and give it a trim!

Anne Frank

Born: 12 June 1929, Frankfurt, Germany.

Anne Frank was a young Jewish girl who grew up in Holland during World War II. She became famous after her diaries were discovered. The diaries tell of how she and her family were forced into hiding by the Nazis just after her 13th birthday and spent two years in secret rooms in a house in Amsterdam. The diaries of her life and her brave spirit have been the subject of many books, plays and films.

Shirley Temple

Born: 1928, Santa Monica, California, USA.

Shirley Temple is possibly the most famous child star ever. She performed on stage and in movies throughout the 1930s and 1940s, often upstaging adult co-stars in such films as 'Heidi' and 'Rebecca of Sunnybrook Farm' (both of which she made when she was only ten!). Her success faded in her twenties but in 1989, President Bush made her an ambassador to Czechoslovakia.

Children in History

It's not only adults that do amazing things. Throughout history children have made their mark in incredible ways...

Wolfgang Amadeus Mozart

Born: 5 December 1791, Salzburg, Austria.

Wolfgang Amadeus Mozart was a musically-gifted child genius who went on to even greater success in his brief adult life. At the age of four he completed his first composition (Minuet and Trio for Piano in G). And by his 10th birthday he had already written several symphonies. His colourful life was brought to the big screen in the film 'Amadeus'. Frequently ill, he died – some say poisoned by a jealous rival – at the age of 24.

Peter Pan

Created: 1911 by JM Barrie, United Kingdom.

Peter Pan is the star of JM Barrie's much-loved children's book about the boy who never grows up and his adventures in Never-Never Land with the fairy Tinkerbell and the evil Captain Hook. It is a wonderful read about being young and believing in the unbelievable. JM Barrie donated profits from the sales of the book to the Great Ormond Street Hospital for Sick Children. Since his death, the publishers have continued to make donations.

Ways To Save

Try collecting 20 pence pieces in an empty Smarties tube. When it's full you should have enough for a CD!

School questionnaire results

The results of last issue's questionnaire are now in and, first of all, we'd like to say "thank you" to everyone who took part. The response was overwhelming and the findings are fascinating:

JUST A JOKE!

Why did the chocolate button want to go to school?
Because it wanted to be a Smartie!
Zara Sukharisingh, age 10

- Nearly all of you said that you liked going to school (with just over half saying "yes" and just under half saying "sometimes"). The number that said no is less than five per cent – great news!

- Just over three-quarters of you said that you liked your form teacher. More great news – for your form teacher!

- Your favourite subjects were maths, art and PE, with maths just coming out on top. You brain boxes!

- Most of you would like to go to university when you are older.

- If you could do another sport at school, the favourite would be trampolining, with over one in three of you picking it out from our list of options. High flyers!

- We asked whether there should be more PE/sport at school, and 68 per cent of you said "yes".

- And when we asked you what subject you would like to do that your school doesn't offer, most of you chose cookery and a variety of languages. Maybe you'll all be French chefs – oh là là!

SCIENCE SPOT

GLACIERS

When snow falls on the highest mountains it does not melt; it just builds up. As new layers of snow are deposited, they press down on the existing snow, turning it into densely packed ice. This causes huge sheets of ice to form in hollows on the mountain side. Rivers of ice flow from these hollows and these are called glaciers. They move slowly down the mountain side (about a metre a day) and into valleys, before reaching the sea. Here they either break up into icebergs or stay in one piece as vast, floating platforms. Glaciers can now only be seen in the Antarctic and Greenland but during the last Ice Age (about 11,000 years ago) ice sheets covered nearly a third of the planet's surface.

Jo's diary

31 December

Dad keeps saying that my New Year's resolution should be to earn my own keep! I hope he's only joking because there are lots of things that I want to do at school before I get a job – like learn to use a microscope in science next year. My real resolution is to save more money – I don't know what for yet but I'm sure I'll think of something!

1 January

It's 1997! Pretty soon it'll be the Millennium – I can't wait. The celebrations will be fantastic. And then we'll be into the 21st century – wow! I reckon we'll be zooming around the Universe in little spaceships by then, but Dad says we won't even notice the difference – what a downer!

2 January

The rest of the Gang were talking about joining an ice hockey club today – Anna is really excited about it. I'm not sure if ice hockey is the sport for me – for a start my glasses wouldn't fit under the helmet! The computer game might be fun though – and finger exercise is very important!

3 January

I now know what I'm saving up for: I've decided that I'm going to be a very famous scientist, which means that I'll need a huge laboratory full of lots of expensive equipment and test tubes. I wonder how much money I'll need to save? Lots, I suppose. Maybe I'll save up for a bigger piggy bank first! Better yet, I'll get an elephant bank!

BRAINTEASER

5AS by 31 May 1997. The first 20 correct answers drawn will win Lights Out from Tiger Electronics, the addictive electronic game with thousands of puzzles and three levels of play. (Batteries not included.)

July.
See you then!
